

Carrollton:

FRIDAY, APRIL 1, 1836.

It is said that, the School Law was so amended, at the late session of the Legislature, as to make the post of School Examiner elective; and that each township will elect two persons to serve, one year, in that capacity.

Some of our subscribers have intimated to us, that they have had enough of the controversy, growing out of the escape; and we are, at length, heartily willing to concur in the opinion. We have borne with it thus far, from a desire to redeem the pledges which we gave at the commencement of our career as publishers. It is probable that neither of the parties will think it necessary to pursue the subject further; but, if Mr Kelly should desire it, he will have the right to conclude, without introducing new matter.

Congress.—In looking over our Washington papers, we notice but little Congressional news of much interest. Mr. Benton's 'Expunging Resolution' is still under consideration in the Senate; and, as it is decidedly a party movement, it will doubtless give rise to an angry and protracted debate. If the limits of any of the speeches should admit, we shall publish one on each side of the question.—The following is the form of the resolution as introduced by Mr. Benton:

"Resolved, That the said resolve be expunged from the journal; and for that purpose, that the Secretary of the Senate, at such time as the Senate may appoint, shall bring the manuscript journal of the session of 1833-4 into the Senate, and in presence of the Senate, draw black lines round the said resolve, and write across the face thereof, in strong letters, the following words: 'Expunged by order of the Senate, this day of ——— in the year of our Lord, 1836.'"

An Act.—"The act to fix and apportion the Representation in the General Assembly of the State of Ohio," demands the attention of our readers. It will be found in another column.

Florida War.—The accounts which we have lately published, in relation to the mysterious war now raging in Florida, represent Gen. Gaines of the U. S. Army with all his force in that quarter, as being in a most perilous situation. From later accounts, it seems that Gen. Clinch's force has, at length, united with that of Gen. Gaines—constituting an army 2000 strong. With this force it is supposed, the war may be successfully terminated in Florida, without further seriously disastrous consequences to the U. States forces.

To the Commanders in chief of the Mill Party, GENTLEMEN:

In reply to your communication, of the 25th inst. it behooves me to be up and doing—seeing that you have had to condescend so low as to procure a man, (through whom to vend your poisonous affluvia,) in answer to whose enquiries I should most unquestionably have had nothing to say, if I had been aware, who that man was that was to have come out over his own signature; for this one reason; it is a well known fact that my friend Jonathan Kelly is not capable of writing any communication for the press.

But I am willing to admit that Mr Kelly is an unassuming, innocent, ignorant man, the pliant tool of the leaders of the party. There are some of the party who, I am well satisfied, have Ideality enough to know that my allusions and allegations were not intended for them; and to that part of the mill party I appeal for the truth of my assertion, when I say that Mr Kelly is not capable of writing any communication for the public eye! I have no disposition to make an attack upon the party referred to; but has the man who pretends to be the leader of that party, the character of an honest farmer? I have no illusion to you Mr Kelly; and I wish you to know that I have no personal antipathy against you. But would it not be better for you, (as I stated in my first communication,) to attend to your own business; and not meddle with the concerns of your neighbors?—You cannot possibly expect to make the people of Carroll county believe that you are the writer. No, sir; I will venture the assertion that there is no honest farmer in the county, who will believe you. Your forehead is not properly constructed; for Ideality is so poorly developed that it cannot escape the detection of any one that you would never have made an attack on the Sheriff, if you had not been put forward by others. Which then is the most honorable man? You think the "game" is too low for you! And I am at very different and other game than yourself. The game I aim at wings its flight in the air, and cannot be reached by any thing short of a rifle or shot gun.

"A Farmer," (or more properly speaking,) the tool of the champions of that party, says, in one of his communications no man dare approach the Sheriff, but those who voted for him: I can inform the writer that, like him, I voted for a man for the office of Sheriff, who was not elected. But I am always willing to submit to the majority; and am unwilling to see an officer abused by a set of men, whose characters are so much beneath the dignity of gentlemen, of which the public are aware.

But, gentlemen, the scales are fast falling off your eyes; and you are now beginning to see the error of your ways.—The unmanly course that you have universally pursued, has caused your party to dwindle into mere nothingness; and you are fast sinking in the estimation of your neighbors and the public generally, as a proof of it. I refer you to your neighbors, who are honest farmers. You would I am well aware, be rejoiced to see the Sheriff prostrated in the good opinions of that part of the community to which he owes his election; but I trust there are men enough in the county, who can see the object of your attack upon him. It is well known that the Sheriff was an old farmer, and an honest one too; and had no experience as an officer, until the people of Carroll county thought proper to elect him Sheriff.

Now, Mr. Kelly, take my advice; attend to your own business; keep Uncle Sam's mail in motion; and the citizens of the county will not know but that you are capable of spelling your A-B-C's. Permit me to subscribe myself yours beyond expression.

S. K. DAVATT.

March 29th, 1836.

To the Editors:

In your paper of the 25th inst I find that a would-be something has come out over the signature of "A Mill party man," requesting the Sheriff to give answers to his questions; which, if he did, in my opinion, and in the opinion of a majority of the citizens of the county, would be groveling in the dust, being aware, as he certainly must be, of the character who has put the questions; and I think the public will be aware of the author, when they peruse the following verses—which (if I am not mistaken) I have perused in the adventures of Baron Munchausen or Robinson Crusoe.—They will be found below. And now my friend, "A Mill party man," feeling confident that the Sheriff will not answer your mean and unmanly questions, I will take the liberty of answering one or two of them, to your first, I answer, no. To your second, third, &c. I say that in my humble opinion, no free citizen will believe you honest, much less your enquiries. Would it not be much better for you to attend to your own domestic circle, and frequent your licks at or near the bridge, to consult the course you will pursue? The verses which you will find annexed, are truly worth the meditation of Pope.

Went out one day to drill some crows;
His first lieutenant was a woodchuck,
He gave the word, eyes right, heads up, &c.

ANECDOTE OF GENERAL LEE.—General Lee was remarkably slovenly in his dress and manners, and has often been subject to ridicule and insult. He was once attending General Washington to a place distant from the camp. Riding on, he arrived at the house where they were to dine, some time before the rest of the company.

He went directly to the kitchen demanding something to eat; when the cook, taking him for a servant, told him she would give him some victuals in a moment, but he must help her on with the pot. This he complied with and set down to some cold meat which she had placed before him on the dresser. This girl was remarkably inquisitive about the guests who were coming, particularly of Lee, who she had heard was one of the oddest and ugliest men in the world.

In a few moments she desired the General again to assist her in placing on the pot, and scarcely had he finished, when she requested him to take the bucket and go to the well. Lee made no objection, and began drawing the water. In the mean time General Washington arrived, and an aid de camp was despatched in search of Lee, whom to his surprise he found engaged as above. But what was the confusion of the poor girl on hearing the aid de camp address the man with the title, your excellency.

The mug fell from her hands, and dropping on her knees, she began to cry for pardon, when Lee who was ever ready to see the impropriety of his own conduct, but never willing to change it, gave her a crown, and turning to the aid de camp, he observed, "You see, young man, the advantage of a fine coat, the man of consequence is indebted to it for respect: neither virtue nor abilities, without it, would make him look like a gentleman."

Periodical Literature. CINCINNATI MIRROR.

Edited by W D Gallagher & T H Shreve.

A NEW VOLUME JUST COMMENCED.

CIRCUMSTANCES connected with Mr. Marshall's private arrangements, having induced him to discontinue 'The Buckeye,' that publication, in accordance with the wish of a large majority of its subscribers, will be issued hereafter under its old title, the 'CINCINNATI MIRROR.'

The undersigned, in becoming the proprietors of this extensively circulated periodical, have the gratification of stating to the old friends of the 'Mirror,' and to the more recent subscribers to the Buckeye, that Messrs. William D. Gallagher and Thomas H. Shreve will resume its editorial management. In mentioning the names of these gentlemen, whose industry and literary qualifications are so well known, the publishers deem it superfluous to expatiate on the future character of the work; under their superintendence the CINCINNATI MIRROR attained its thousands of subscribers, and was recognized by most literary periodicals, in the union, as inferior to none of its contemporaries;—incontestable proofs of the estimation of their merits, and of the appreciation of Western Literature.

From the 'Salutatory' of the editors, on resuming their duties, we make the following extract: 'Gentlemen of means having become its proprietors, one difficulty which has always attended the Mirror, will hereafter not exist. We therefore bespeak for it at this time, knowing that it has suffered somewhat in public estimation by the several phases which it has presented within a few months, the attention of the western community: It shall be our endeavor to inspire general confidence, and merit general support! Inculcating matter for the selected part of the Mirror, we shall diligently ransack the popular magazines of the day, and the various new books that are constantly issuing from the teeming press, and we shall have, an especial eye to variety and richness. In the original department, we have secured the constant assistance of a number of gentlemen of education, talent and experience as writers. With us, one important aim will be, to bring out and foster the unknown unencouraged literary talent of the West. The cause of Western Literature we have long had at heart; and we have made some sacrifices and labored hard, and we trust not ineffectively, to arouse slumbering energies, and elevate the character of the literature of this section of the great Union. Anonymous correspondents shall receive from us respectful attention—but as we intend to make the CINCINNATI MIRROR a correct representative of the Literary Character of the West, we must be allowed the privilege of rejecting common place tales, prosing essays, lame verses, and crudities of all kinds.

The arrangements which have been entered into, will place the CINCINNATI MIRROR under better auspices, than have attended it at any time since the period of its commencement. It will contain a larger quantity of reading matter than heretofore, and will be printed on superior or super royal paper, with entirely new brevier type. Every number will be furnished with a handsome cover; and the work will be issued punctually every Saturday morning, and be sent by mail the same day to distant subscribers.

TERMS:—Three Dollars per annum, if paid in advance, or Three dollars and fifty cents, if payment be delayed six months.

FLASH, RYDER, & Co.,
Booksellers and publishers,
Third st. near the Post Office.

N. B. The first number of the fifth volume of the Mirror was published on the first instant. Those persons who may order the work, within two or three months, will please say whether they wish the numbers from the beginning of the volume. A handsome and well filled cover is published with each number. Between one and two pages of this is taken up with a Business Directory, in which may be found the names and locations of the principal business men of the city.
